DETAILED ACTION

Examiner acknowledges the remarks filed March 19, 2007.

35 U.S.C. 101 reads as follows:

Whoever invents or discovers any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof, may obtain a patent therefor, subject to the conditions and requirements of this title.

Claims 1-32 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 101 because the claimed invention is not supported by either a specific and substantial asserted utility, a credible asserted utility or a well established utility.

Regarding independent claims 1 and 15 and their respective dependent claims, it is unclear to the examiner how an apparatus or method can consistently be used to induce emotions. The claims assert an emotion induction protocol is capable of inducing a desired emotion, however an individual user of the device has their own subjective responses to any given stimuli, and individuals respond differently to the same stimuli. For example, using lavender as a stimulus maybe used to relax one user, but another user maybe allergic to the stimulus and not create the desired effect to relax a user. Additionally, a lavender scent maybe used to relax an individual on one day yet that same stimulus may not work in the same fashion if that same user has a cold an is unable to use their sense of smell in the same or similar manner.

Claims 1-32 are also rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph. Specifically, since the claimed invention is not supported by either a specific and substantial asserted utility, a credible asserted utility or a well established utility for the reasons set forth above, one skilled in the art clearly would not know how to use the claimed invention.
